Archiframes Collection: endless possibilities for customising surfaces, in residential or contract spaces

The Archiframes collection, designed by Barbieri Magalini for Prodital, is a collection of bold-shaped modular panels, clad in fine nabuk leather and adorned with geometric embroidery. The panels’ original shapes, reminiscent of architectural silhouettes, offer interior designers and architects a wide range of compositional possibilities, allowing for limitless creativity in customizing spaces. Available in various shapes, sizes, and materials, this collection presents a contemporary alternative to traditional vertical decorations—such as wainscoting, friezes, and moldings—for sophisticated residential, contract, and professional interiors.

Venice, with its streets, canals and palaces inspired the collection.

The typical nomenclature of Venetian pedestrian streets, determined by their size, and squares gave life to the names of the modules; while the silhouettes of the windows determined the shapes of the modules.

Behind the project

Barbieri Magalini is a creative duo. Brand custodians, curators, interpreters of the ‘Made in Italy’ ethos, seekers of charm. These definitions encapsulate the modus operandi of the creative duo Barbieri Magalini, designers of this project. Their creative approach is nurtured and carefully guarded, always driven by a spirit of excellence and a panoramic vision that draws from worlds closest to them, such as architecture, art, fashion, design, cuisine, and music.
